Analog Express Launches New Corporate Website

November 3, 2008 – Analog Express has recently launched of its revamped website. The site www.analogexpress.com features a new design and page structure, as well as improved and expanded content describing AX's products and modern power solutions with a fresh, customer-centric focus. The site has many dynamic new features, including "Search by Part Number," "Search by Keyword" and "Cross Reference Search" that help users get product recommendations and other related information according to entered search terms. The new website is expected to reinforce Analog Express's position as a global innovator in the high-speed, high-power analog industry, providing modern power solutions for the customers.

"We've enhanced our web presence to provide more detailed information on the Company's distribution network, and our wide variety of products. We will continue to add more features in the future that we hope will make AX the "go to" site for our customers and visitors." said Cedric Tsang, Vice-President, Sales and Marketing.
